

Lynn Schuette

With no fanfare or fuss, Lynn Schuette began to change San Diego's cultural landscape with the 1980 opening of Sushi. Her downtown performance art gallery, which she ran until 1996, featured an array of proudly edgy, genre-blurring artists at the only venue in town daring enough to book them. A skilled visual artist and poet herself, Schuette was fearless as a curator. She had an almost unerring ability to find and showcase singular talents from near and far before they became nationally celebrated. Artists to appear here under the auspices of Sushi included future MacArthur Foundation "genius grant" recipient Guillermo Gomez-Pena, Diamanda Galas, Eric Bogosian, Culture Clash, Whoopi Goldberg, Karen Finley, Donald Byrd and theater director Bartlett Sher, who would go on to win a Tony Award in 2006.
