MURAL, MURAL, ON THE WALL/Lynn Schuette, is the coordinator of the Gaslamp Quarter Project Area Committee's murals project. Here, she displays a mural that was presented to the group for selection. Five murals will be painted on buildings in the Gaslamp Quarter, but sites have yet to be announced.

OTHER PROJECT/Art Cole has created yet another trolley mural. This on the construction shed at the Santa Fe Depot.

GASLAMP SELECTS 5 MURAL CONTEST FINALISTS

The City of San Diego and the Gaslamp Quarter Project Area Committee have announced the five finalists in the Gaslamp Quarter Murals Project.

The five finalists are: Heidi Hardin; John Hubbell; Jay Johnson/Gary Ghirardi; Dan Rice; David Robinson. Special recognition was given to the following: Thomas Holder; Ellen Irvin; Sammy Pascarella.

These artists will be commissioned ($2,000 each) to paint outdoor murals on selected sites in the historic Gaslamp Quarter district this summer. The site locations of the murals are still being negotiated with local property owners.

The five finalists were chosen from 15 semi-finalists, who had been selected from the original 71 artists who submitted resumes and letters of interest. Designs were judged on the following:

1. Quality of design.
2. Appropriateness to the Gaslamp Quarter and building.
3. Ability of artist to complete project.

The Mural Project coordinator is Lynn Schuette, artist and Director of Sushi, an alternative performance/exhibition space. Gloria Poore, designer is technical advisor for the project.

The advisory panel, which has set policy and selected the finalists is composed of the following members: Dr. Eugene Ray, architect and professor, San Diego State University; Michael Stepner, assistant planning director, City of San Diego; Kit Goldman, actress and producer, Gaslamp Quarter Theatre; Isabelle Wasserman, freelance writer for the San Diego Union and other publications; Peggy Ralph, acting director, Gaslamp Quarter Association. D
